Two Women Injured

Three persons were seriously injured at 9:30 o'clock last night when the car in which they were riding, driven by H. W. Spaulding, 46, of 2057 Deauville Drive, Los Angeles, sideswiped a heavy laden truck on the state highway, two miles from El Toro.

The injured were:

Mary Daugherty, 27, of 4363 Monroe street, Los Angeles, broken clavicle, scalp wounds and other cuts and bruises.

Frances Murphy, 25, of 2436 Broadway, San Diego, concussion of the brain and cuts and bruises.

H. W. Spaulding, 46, 2057 Deauville Drive, Los Angeles, fractured ribs and cuts and bruises.

The car the three were riding in sideswiped a truck driven by R. L. Jones, which was headed towards San Diego. Jones reported he was traveling five miles an hour at the time. He claimed the other car was speeding. The Spaulding machine overturned after striking the truck.

California Highway Officers Vernon Barnhill and Joe Clever ordered the arrest of Spaulding on suspicion of driving while under the influence of liquor. He is held prisoner at the county hospital where all three of the injured were taken. Jones was not hurt.

George W. Moody, of 515 West Whiting street, Fullerton, received a serious scalp injury at 9 p. m. yesterday when the car which he was driving collided with a truck parked in the street, at Euclid and Lincoln avenues, according to a report filed with the state police.

Moody's car crashed into a truck which had been temporarily abandoned by the driver, who had walked back a distance of 100 feet to read a road sign, it was reported. The truck was knocked over into a ditch. Moody was injured when the windshield broke cutting his scalp so that 12 stitches were necessary to close the wound.

Amelio Herrera, Placentia youth, suffered a broken right leg yesterday when the car in which he was riding with two other boys, skidded in loose earth and overturned, near Placentia. He was taken to the Orange county hospital.

Roosevelt, riding up Pennsylvania avenue, over part of the route he will follow to his inaugural next March was cheered by spectators.

He passed a line of negroes waiting for food at Salvation Army headquarters on the lower avenue, near where the bonus army riot occurred last summer. The negroes, attracted by the noise of the motorcycle escort, looked up but did not leave their places in the bread-line.

A hundred or more spectators wandered around the driveway leading to the front portico of the White House, peering to catch a glimpse of figures moving about inside.

President Hoover and Secretary of Treasury Mills were waiting in the red room when the noise of the motorcycle escort was heard outside. Governor Roosevelt and Professor Moley were led in through the ground floor and entered the small family elevator which was installed in the White

COL. ROBINS IN FULL CONTROL OF FACULTIES

Dr. Griffin reiterated that Col. Robins still was a very sick man. "We haven't any other idea as to what caused his attack of amnesia," Mrs. Robins said. "If we could ascertain what happened from the time he disappeared from New York, Sept. 3, until Sept. 9, when he reached Whittier, N. C., where he was found, a cause might be found.

"He was in splendid physical and mental shape when he left Maine to go to Washington to confer with President Hoover August 31. The day before that he had been at Kennebunk, Me., with a party of friends viewing the eclipse of the sun.

"Throughout his life he had been in robust health, with the single exception of the terrible year he spent in Russia as an intermediary, after the World war. The Americans in the group lacked sufficient food, and for a year lived on little more than black bread and coffee. The experience weakened him, but he later apparently regained his full strength of mind and body."

Mrs. Robins spoke with full frankness of the situation, even recognizing there were reports, she said, that some fell. Col. Robins' condition was not a genuine case of amnesia, and that possibly the whole thing was an inexplicable intrigue.

"Those who think so," she said, "will just have to think so. What are you going to do with people who think like that? If they can find out what occurred during those six blank days from September 3 to September 9, they could answer that question."

Service Delayed By Trolley Break

Service on the Pacific Electric Los Angeles-Santa Ana interurban line was interrupted early this morning when a trolley line broke down between Artesia and Cypress, causing trains operating in both directions to be held up for a considerable time. After a work train had been sent out from Los Angeles, repairs were made to the line, and traffic was restored to the regular schedule at about 8 a.m.

LEADERLESS

These pseudo-statesmen who beat their breasts and say "We will not cancel the foreign debt" sound as if they are saying something. They are not.

You cannot find a man in Washington who is in favor of debt cancellation. Even the debtors do not dare suggest such a thing. Those who pride against it and do not say otherwise where they stand are merely trying to duck the issue.

There are only two sides to the question. One is to force the debtors into default. The other is to get as much out of them as you can.

LEADERLESS

Handling of the war debts issue all along has been a comic opera. At any minute you can expect the principals to break out into a

The absurdity is not confined to any party or sect. While some Administration men have jumped through hoops to folst the issue off on the Democrats, some of those other eminent gentlemen show admirable footwork in ducking.

No effort for leadership in the matter has been evinced by anyone up to now.

R. F. C.

There is an unanswerable reason why the R. F. C. has lately become tighter with its money.

Too many of the earlier loans turned out to be sour. There is for instance a loan for around $70,000 to a Texas bank. It is not worth the paper it is written on. The corporation advisors think the loss on this transaction will reach $100,000.

A great secret is being made of these instances. The truth may be forced out at the coming session of Congress.

MONEY

One of the worst examples of how the R. F. C. was hoodwinked is the case of a city banker who obtained a large loan. He reorganized his bank taking nearly everything that could be called assets to his new institution. The old one was left with an empty sack. Among other things himself, hand bought from his right an option for quarters in which the new bank now houses. The loss to the old bank was $100,000 on the transaction. It is the old bank which received the loan from the R. F. C. The new bank will make money.

MOLEY

This Prof. Raymond Moley must be a remarkable man.

Some years ago a nationally known economist received a letter from Prof. Moley. The professor wrote that he had a confession to make. He said he had taken his position in the Sacco-Vanzetti case largely because of personal jealousy of the economist to whom he was writing. He said he was sorry and was anxious that the economist should know.

That letter showed a kind of personal humility and courage which is utterly unintelligible to politicians in Washington. Here personal jealousies are taken as a matter of course.

NATIONAL WHIRLIGIG

- News Behind the News -

WASHINGTON

By Paul Mallon

For some reason the facts about the supposed effort to dynamite Mr. Hoover's train in Nevada have not been made public.

The truth is that the sensation was manufactured by a clever bridge tender. He wanted publicity for a book he was writing. He placed a pistol almost flat on his hand and fired a bullet grazing a finger. Then he wiped the blood over his face and flagged down the pilot train preceding the presidential special.

His story about fighting off two men carrying dynamite was lacking in truth. Investigators found several pieces of dynamite nearby. The bridge tender had planted them there.

Government agents have secretly obtained from him a full confession. They are holding it because he may not be prosecuted. He has a wife and several children. They are very poor.

DEBTS

The Administration recently sounded out some congressmen on its compromise debt proposal. Democrats were not very strong for it. Neither was Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee.

The idea of permitting negotiations on future installments if the December 15 payments are made does not go far enough for them. They want a general conference including disarmament and trade barriers as well as debts.

After getting this bad news the White House folded up to await Gov. Roosevelt's arrival today.

FINALE

The British are prepared to pay this time but never again.

That information comes confidentially from a source competent to speak for the British Government. It clears up the muddle created by the State and Treasury Departments offering opposite views.

One swore Britain could not pay and the other proclaimed it would pay. Incidentally the Treasury was right.

MEETING

Until the debt question came to bat informed New York opinion held that cooperation between Hoover and Roosevelt would be worked out through mutual contacts with congress rather than by personal conference. The debt problem changed the situation entirely but Wall Street still doubts that other personal meetings will follow the first. More can be accomplished with congress if the old and new presidents avoid too many commitments to each other.

RECKLESS DRIVER GETS JAIL TERM

Charged with reckless driving, Ed Havig, road worker residing south of Laguna Beach, was sentenced to serve 90 days in the county jail, the sentence being suspended on condition he pay a fine of $250, in Justice Kenneth Morrison's court today. The fine was not paid and Havig was committed to jail.

The man was arrested by Walter Meyer, California highway patrol officer, yesterday and he pleaded guilty at that time. He came up for sentence today.

Meyer said the man had been drinking "canned heat" shortly before the arrest.

AUTHORITIES SAY PEAK OF FLU PASSED

While an accurate check of cases of influenza in Orange county has not been completed, officials of the Orange county health department feel that the peak of the epidemic has been reached and conditions are improving.

According to health officers doctors of the county have not been in a position, from point of time, to report influenza cases to the health office. In response to a letter sent out last week, however, reports now are coming in to the office.

Officials of the health department have based the statement that the peak of the epidemic has been reached, on school attendance. It was said this morning that school absences are not increasing and in many areas are beginning to decline. This school attendance, health department officials say, is the best indicator of the progress of the disease, next to reports from doctors.

To assist residents of the county in coping with the epidemic the following rules have been prepared by the health department:

"Go to bed immediately upon feeling ill. Stay there as long as your physician directs.

"Eat lightly and take high fluid intake—water and citrus fruit juices.

"Insure good elimination by bowel and avoid purging.

"Avoid contact with crowds during your illness. This is particularly true of schools and other public gatherings.

"While in public places keep your hands off of stair rails and show cases.

"Wash hands frequently and keep hands out of nose and mouth.

"Avoid persons who are ill even though it is just a cold."

FATAL SHOOTING HELD ACCIDENT AFTER INQUEST

Sammy Purdue, 13, who held the gun that fired a shot fatally wounding Lawrence Theis, 12, only son of Mr. and Mrs. E. N. Theis, 102 North Flower street, Brea, was absolved of all blame in the fatal accident by a coroner's jury at an inquest held this morning in the McAulay and Suters Funeral home in Fullerton.

It was announced today, following an autopsy over the body of the slain youth, that the death of the youth was caused directly from the bullet which entered his heart. It was not known at first whether or not the bullet struck the heart.

The lad was playing with the Purdue boy near the Randolph packing house Sunday afternoon when Sammy stepped off a pile of boxes and slipped. The gun discharged as he fell, the bullet striking his companion in the chest, causing death early yesterday morning.

Funeral arrangements had not been made at noon today.

YOUTH STRUCK BY CAR SEEKS BALM

Alleging carelessness, negligence and recklessness of operation of an automobile Lyle Allen Kenney, a minor, through his guardian Harry Elliot, has filed suit in superior court against Roy R. Divel, San Clemente undertaker, and his wife, Mrs. Patti Divel. The suit is demanding damages totaling $10,828 for injuries received when the Kenney boy was struck by the Divel automobile.

According to the complaint the accident happened on November 19, 1931, on U. S. Highway 101 at Doheny Park. Mrs. Divel, according to the complaint, was driving the machine when it struck and ran over Kenney.

The other side of the question was the application of Paul Ponpler, owner of the Anaheim Bottling Works for a permit to sell beverages to be permitted by law if and when "the existing liquor laws are modified by Congress."

County Clerk J. M. Beck read the letters pledging support. They were identical in wording and said:

"It will be surprising if some of the wet sympathizers did not urge you to repeal the county ordinances regarding the liquor traffic."

The letter from the Orange City Board of Strategy was signed by D. C. Drake, president.

A copy of this letter was received and was signed by the following: Rev. Franklin H. Minick, pastor of the First Christian church of Orange; the Rev. Frederick Scheerer, First Baptist church, the Rev. Lawrence V. Lucas, First Methodist Episcopal church; the Rev. J. S. Sorenson, Mennonite church; Mrs. Minnie Neville, president of the Orange W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Earle Crawford, president Orange Women's club; and Mrs. Euphemia Ralls, president of the Orange Women's Relief Corps.

No action was taken on either of the letters of the application other than the remark of Chairman John Mitchell, "the county is not in the business of licensing liquor establishments."

ISSUE ORDERS AGAINST FIRE INTERFERENCE

Persons who chase fire engines about the city, or who park within a block of a fire, are likely to find themselves in serious trouble, following an order made last night by Chief of Police F. W. Howard, instructing officers to make arrests for these violations of the law immediately.

Much trouble has been experienced by the fire department during the past several weeks, both by cars that have followed too close to the fire engines, and by persons who park their cars too close to scenes of fires.

Many firemen have been handicapped in getting a hose to the blaze, due to the fact that cars rush into the streets and block the way to fire hydrants.

Although the council did not take up the matter last night, William Penn, fire commissioner, and Chief John Luxembourg both declared that drastic action would be taken. This was in accord with the instructions issued the entire police department.

Heavy fines and jail sentences may await violators of the state law pertaining to cars parking within fire zones and the promiscuous chasing of fire departments as they race through the streets, Howard said.

E. TEMPLETON IS KILLED IN PLANE CRACKUP

the past week for the Union Oil Company of California. Lienesc is head of the oil company's aviation department and piloted the plane at the time of the crash.

Gallagher recently came to Beeville from New York City.

The crash occurred when the three returned from an afternoon pleasure flight and attempted to land after nightfall. The plane struck a tree at the field's edge and hurtled to the ground.

Farmers who rushed to the scene found Templeton dead and the other two men pinned under the debris. The plane did not catch fire.

Gallagher was rushed to Hospital where he died and Lienesc remained under care of physicians in the hospital here.

Templeton's body was held by a Wharton undertaking firm pending word from relatives in California.

Templeton Former Resident of S. A.

Eugene Templeton, killed yesterday in an airplane crash at Wharton, Tex., was a graduate of Santa Ana high school. His father, J. C. Templeton, was superintendent of public schools here approximately 27 years ago. Since graduating from Santa Ana and Stanford, Eugene Templeton had spent most of his life as a geologist in Siberia and South America.

No definite action was taken regarding the matter, it being referred to A. C. Hasenjaeger, street commissioner for action, but in all likelihood, the city will pay for the current. It was brought out. The cost is approximately $80.

Ruddy said.

There will be lights in 120 trees which will be hung on the city's light standards in the downtown section of the city and work of putting up the decorations will start on November 26, Ruddy said.

L. A. MAN HELD UP IN S. A. BY TWO BANDITS

Two youthful bandits, yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock held up H. Solomon, 47, of 1010 Great Republic building, Los Angeles, on South Main street here, and at the point of a gun robbed him of $4 in cash, according to a report he made to the city police.

Solomon was driving towards Santa Ana. He was accosted by two men at the side of the road who were tinkering with the engine of their car. He stopped and one of the men pointed a pistol at him and got in the car with him.

Solomon was then ordered to drive north to the Delhi road and then west for two blocks where he was told to stop the car. The bandit then relieved him of his money. In the meantime, his partner drove the other car to the same location and picked up his friend.

To insure their escape, the bandits took the keys of Solomon's car with them.

BIG COMPANY WITH LAUDER ON WORLD TOUR

With Sir Harry Lauder, the famous Scotch comedian, and an excellent supporting company, including an orchestra under Jerald Shen, listed as the main attraction, a record attendance is expected for a benefit performance to be given Thursday evening, December 1, at the high school auditorium.

The event is given under the auspices of the Santa Ana Rotary club for benefit of the Santa Ana Junior College Student Loan fund.

The clever comedian is now on a world tour, in the course of which he is appearing in several Southern California cities. His extensive repertoire, handled by a group of high class artists, include the Littlejohns in "A Garden of Million Jewels," Walters and Walters in "The Cry Baby," Dean Alphonse Zelaya, the philosophical pianist; Madie and Ray in "Spinning Along;" Yorke and Johnson in Southern Harmonies and other numbers.

Council Notes

Mrs. M. Roupe appeared before the city council last night to ask permission to open a tea room and boarding house at 408 West Second street. Her application was referred to the city planning commission.

Application of E. Murrell and H. Quintana to open a pool hall at 903 East Fourth street was referred to the police department and the city attorney with instructions to report back at the next regular meeting of the board.

The application of John J. Mills to open a second hand store at 420 North Sycamore street, which came up before the board last week and was referred to the police department for investigation, was given approval last night.

All bids received by the council a week ago for a chlorinator to be used by the street department were ordered rejected by the council last night and the city purchasing agent ordered to purchase a chlorinator on the open market.

Gallagher was rushed to Hospital where he died and Lienesc remained under care of physicians in the hospital here.

Templeton's body was held by a Wharton undertaking firm pending word from relatives in California.

Following complaints which have been received by several city councilmen regarding diagonal parking in front of a market on South Main street, the city engineer was, last night, instructed to paint the section for parallel parking only.

STATEMENT OF THE COUNCIL

tions or opinions on the part of the speaker.

L. L. Beaman, of the junior college faculty, president of the Santa Ana Council of International Relations, presided over the meeting. The speaker was introduced by Dr. George Warner, pastor of the First M. E. church. Several vocal solos by Mrs. Cecile Fross Willits, accompanied by Clarence Gustlin, pianist, formed part of the program arranged for the occasion.

Foreign Policy

Taking up the subject of the nation's foreign policy, the speaker called attention to the isolation and avoidance of foreign entanglements counseled by Washington and Jefferson at the birth of the republic. Development in means of transportation has removed what was once considered natural barriers, and has forced the nation to abandon this policy for political as well as economic reasons, Dr. Talbott explained.

During recent years the United States government has placed an interpretation on the Monroe doctrine different to that adopted in former years, a change which has gone far to disarm the resentful attitude evinced by Central and South American republics, engendered by the workings of the Monroe doctrine, it was explained by the speaker. Formerly the doctrine was invoked to protect the selfish interests of commercial enterprises in South American republics. Today, the United States government takes the attitude that American investments in those countries must be operated in accordance with the laws of the nation in which located and must seek protection under the same.

Dr. Talbott pointed out that the United States has never been a military nation in the full sense of the word and as a national policy has always sought to settle disputes with foreign countries in a peaceful way.

Tariff and Debts

While the speaker declined to be drawn into any controversy over tariff protection, he let his listeners understand that he felt trade barriers, such as erected by the Smoot-Hawley act, have a Frankenstein effect on trade in general. Retaliatory tariff measures erected by one nation against another, has practically paralyzed foreign trade, he asserted. Coupled with this observation he cited the present trade barrier between the United States and Canada, which he thought had done as much harm as good to both countries.

The speaker commended the present administration on its successful efforts in restoring amicable relations with Mexico, in which connection he paid tribute to the late Senator Dwight Morrow.

While the United States has declined to discuss the war debts and tariff measures at the world economic conference to be held in London, Dr. Talbott asserted that

Ask Child Protection
In their work for child welfare, the 200,000 members of the Parent-Teacher association have stood first, for the protection of youth, particularly for the safe guarding of health, and in backing the action last week they are carrying out their plan in insisting that unnecessary curtailment of public service to children be avoided, Mrs. Marvin said.

Protest of any action by the state board of health to nullify public health service, and recommendation that the state chairman of legislation submit some plan to insure a more definite program of temperance instruction in California schools were two outstanding actions taken by the state board of managers of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers assembled at San Francisco last week.

Mrs. R. W. Marvin, of Anaheim, president of Fourth District Parent-Teacher association, including all Orange county, who has just returned from the convention, said today that the protest on the public health service matter was a protest of a program that would ultimately undermine the health program of every county health unit in the state of California, and endanger the maternal

Invited guests were Miss Sylvia Thompson and Mrs. S. D. Thompson of Long Beach; Mrs. J. Rowden and Mrs. E. E. Meador of Los Angeles; Mrs. L. A. Welch, Mrs. J. L. CHILDREN BURNED AS GAS EXPLODES

WESTMINSTER, Nov. 22.—Roy Love and his younger brother were recovering today from severe burns about their faces received when an explosion occurred when they were playing with an apparently empty gasoline can at their home in Westminster.

The eyes of both children were uninjured but the rest of their faces are swathed in bandages.

Mrs. Marvin said a large and interested delegation attended the bi-monthly session. The next session will meet in Hollywood in January.

WATER NEEDS OF PLACENTIA ARE DISCUSSED

PLACENTIA, Nov. 22.—Discussion of the water situation in Placentia again occupied the attention of the Placentia city council at their regular session last night, and included discussion of the hearing of the railroad commission two weeks ago, reported on by Nelson Launer, manager of the American States Water company that serves Placentia with domestic water, and tabling of an unsigned petition presented by M. D. Clay, seeking an election on voting bond issues to establish a municipally owned water company.

Clay presented the petition, asking the councilmen if it would be their wish to have it circulated. They agreed the circulation should await the return of the report of the railroad commission hearing held at Placentia on the situation.

Launer said that the application of a settlement of water rates presented at the railroad commission hearing, would lower water rates for the domestic user and increase rates for the commercial user if granted by the commission.

Concerning placing a line from the water tanks on Bradford and Crowther avenues to the packing-houses for fire protection, councilmen agreed with George Bates city engineer, that it should be a six-inch line to properly carry a needed load, and should be laid along the alley paralleling Santa Fe avenue, and Launer reported the company suggested laying a four-inch line along Crowther avenue.

Bates considered a six-inch line essential, and Mayor Clarence Halber is to appoint a committee to meet with managers of the packinghouses to determine the need.

Mayor Halber and E. M. Everett, city treasurer, reported they were favorably impressed with forming of the Orange County League of Municipalities, organized last Thursday at Santa Ana with 14 cities joining, including all in the county except Huntington Beach and Seal Beach. They reported further that the plan to be adopted in trying to get part of the gas tax money for distribution in cities had met with favor.

Letters of thanks, including one telling that Placentia car of city officials entered in the Armistice day parade at Fullerton November 11 had received honorable mention, and one thanking the chief of police, Gus Barnes, for his assistance at the parade, were read.

Coffee roasters from coast to coast NOW admit Ben-Hur was right in telling the truth about coffee!

The sensational success of Ben-Hur Drip coffee started a panic among competitors—which was climaxed when Ben-Hur Drip was chosen as THE ONE coffee to be served the world's athletes at the Olympic Games.

Athletes drinking coffee! The idea was astounding—but men responsible knew that Ben-Hur Drip-filtered Coffee is harmless, freed from indigestible resinous fats and tannic acid. Coffee roasters were shocked—and awakened! They realized that Ben-Hur Drip had made world coffee history!

Then began the scramble for front seats on the drip coffee bandwagon! National brands and coast brands began to dump all sorts of "grinds" into the market—coffee reground finer—or straddling the demand with such absurd claims as "suitable for the drip or other methods of making."

Coffee roasters of the nation—after five years dodging the drip coffee question and minimizing its value—NOW ADMIT THAT BEN-HUR WAS RIGHT! Endless claims will be addressed to the public, hoping to make coffee lovers believe that "drip grinds"—or brands not ground fine enough for complete, economical extraction by the drip method—can be classed with Ben-Hur Drip.

DEMAND THE ORIGINAL... BEN-HUR DRIP. It stands absolutely unmatched. No expense has been spared to develop this perfect drip coffee. We confidently believe that it costs more to produce than any coffee commercially sold in this country!

Ben-Hur Drip is specially selected, blended and scientifically cured to assure even roasting. It also is given an instant flavor release characteristic, so necessary for making perfect drip coffee—an enormous advantage over all other coffees. Then to help preserve its delicious flavor Ben-Hur is "cold-cut" to exact fineness by chilled, fine-mesh knives on rollers. The obsolete burr "grinding" by which coffee flavor is ruined was discarded by Ben-Hur years ago!

Prove to your own taste that, CUP-for-CUP, in ANY test Ben-Hur Drip Coffee is five years ahead of the imitators.

PARIS LOVE

by NINA WILCOX PUTNAM

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING INSTALMENTS

Ten years after the death of Alacia Sayers' father, her mother was worth $60,000,000, made by continuing the manufacture and sale of the now famous motor car Europa. While Alacia was worrying about the constant attentions paid by Alfredo Santini, a gigolo, to her most undesirable middle-aged mother, Alacia fell in love at first sight with a handsome young Frenchman. She learned later that he was Armand de Pas, Prince d'Orange, a clever, slicker pretender to a French throne, who was employed in the Piron jewelery shop in the rue de la Paix. Two other salesmen, Ramon Cabreiro and Etienne Lajarte, were members of Santini's gang of jewel thieves. They substituted a 1,250,000-franc pearl necklace for one of a trayful priced at 300 francs. A girl known as Valentine was to buy it, but was delayed, and Alacia saw it liked it, and bought it. It was Armand who made the sale—the first time Alacia saw him after learning his identity. Mr. Piron recognized it later and she returned it to Armand. Alacia, an American aunt had left him a million dollars on condition that he had "made good" at the age of 30. He was now 32. Then, as his aunt's friends were to decide whether to get the money: Col. Bradley, an American, M. Piron, and the Paris Prefet de Police. Santini was to drive the Europa in the Grand Prix at Monte Carlo. Valentine, jealous of Santini, told Alacia he was going to throw the race. Alacia decided to replace him with Armand and drove out to his mother's chateau to see him.

INSTALMENT 17

"But I am a friend!" Alacia cried with a curious sense of familiarity. "I have the most urgent reasons for seeing him. If you will only let him know who it is, I am certain he will receive me." But the old man stood between her and entrance with a determination which was perfectly apparent.

"He is not here, Mademoiselle," said the servant. Anato Alacia's further astonishment, he started to close the door. This was more than human patience could endure and almost as much to her own amazement as to that of the ancient servant, she suddenly raised her voice in a piercing call.

"Armand! Armand!" she cried at the top of her voice. "It is I, Alacia! I need you! Armand!"

The sound of it echoed terribly through the huge hall and a second figure soon came flying down the dark stairs in alarm. It was a woman this time, a stout, elderly woman in a black dress, a little knitted shawl clutched about her shoulders. She pushed the old man aside quite as though she was accustomed to dealing with similar emergencies, and seizing Alacia by the arm dragged her into the light.

"Madame!" she said harshly, "who are you who cry the Prince's name into the night?"

"I am a friend!" said Alacia, humbly enough. "Please believe me!"

"What has happened to His Highness?" demanded the woman. "Have you brought news of him?"

"News?" asked Alacia. "Then it is true that he is not here!"

"He is not here," the woman answered. "Something has happened." She lowered her voice. "Is it that the time has come at last?" she whispered.

At first Alacia did not understand. Then a light broke upon her. The woman was actually asking for help.

Meantime while Alacia had been in the very act of trying to soothe the girl Victoline into a state of coherence, Mrs. Sayers and San-

BOTH CANINE AND HUMAN CHICKEN THIEVES ROUTED

MIDWAY CITY, Nov. 22.—Both canine and human chicken thieves were routed yesterday as two raids were made on chicken yards in Midway City ranches.

Hearing a commotion among the chickens in his poultry yard, M. R. Granis of Van Buren street went outside to find a white dog trying to kill his chickens.

As Granis attempted to eject the animal, in a sudden burst of rage it leaped for his throat. Granis managed to ward the dog's fangs from his throat but received a badly bitten finger in the fight.

The dog is said to be one of the many wild dogs which are causing much trouble to poultry and live stock owners in the vicinity. This is the first time an attack on a person has been reported.

Chicken thieves had a close call at the Sterling Price ranch at the intersection of Bolsa boulevard and Wright street when they were discovered stealing chickens. Price, who fired at the thieves, believes that one of them may have been struck by the bullet.

The discovery was made just in time to save a large number of chickens, as every fowl on the ranch had been sacked by the thieves who were apparently just ready to put them in their waiting automobile. They left the chickens, however, and made a quick getaway when the gun was fired at them.

The proposed production test here which was to have started November 15, is called off, but it is reported Standard and some of the other major companies are going to test their wells for their own satisfaction. It is said that possibly the production test for the whole field may be undertaken at a later date.

There are six redrill and deepenning jobs underway in the field, three in the town lot area, two of which are Wilshire wells and one by the Young interests of Long Beach, all are in the vicinity of Nineteenth and Ocean and Walnut avenues.

The D. D. Dunlap interests are drilling deeper in a well at Westminster and Garfield. Blake and Frampton and the California Drilling company, each are drilling one well on the East Side, in the vicinity of Huntington and Toronto streets. All these jobs are nearing completion and while under operation during the past several weeks, the six wells and the Huntington Beach Oil company well, seven in all, have provided employment for 100 oil workers, and a number of truckers and have afforded business at the machine shops.

Negotiations are being conducted for three new drilling jobs in the field; two in the Garfield street area and one on the East side. All are to be in proven territory if drilling arrangements are completed.

The Hill well at Fourteenth and Orange is standing on the sand awaiting casing. Drilling operations here were suspended a couple of weeks ago after the bit cut through a sand at a depth of about 2200 feet. Cores are said to indicate a nice pumper in the shallow sand. The Hill interests have a large block of city lot leases in vicinity of the well. It is expected casing will be placed on the rack shortly and the well brought in.

Production in the field maintains its usual status under the curtailment plan. The daily output remains at about 20,000 barrels for the entire field. There is a big demand for crude oil and one company sent representatives in the field offering a bonus for oil, according to reports. Although a bonus was offered there was no unsold oil to be located in the field.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Rees Blythe, daughter, Betty, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Schulz, Frances Schulz, Francis Swan, Margaret Roll, Mr. and Mrs. J. Arthur Miller, Mr. and Mrs. C. McProud, Hobart McProud, Mr. Guy Staplin, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cook, son Bill, Mr. and Mrs. F. R. Lundy, of Alhambra.

"Hop out, sweet lady!" he said. "I will pass, and be with you in a little moment. But don't you dare look at those designs until I arrive. I want to share every minute of your pleasure!"

Like many other shops on the famous street, Piron's occupied part of a building which had once been a palace of sorts. Accessible through a low archway was the flagged courtyard in which pre-revolutionary nobles had mounted their horses, and where court ladies had descended from sedan-chairs. Now it prosaically served the cars of employees, the delivery wagons of the commercial tenants, and on occasion, provided parking space for clients who drove themselves. With the air of an established aristocrat she criticized the newcomers with justice and precision, and Santini, with his unfailing applause, was an inspiring audience. Kate Sayers purred with content, recapturing for the first time in several days the feeling of lost youth regained. As usual, Santini tactfully arose a few moments before the luncheon check was presented. He made a little formal bow and smiled.

"Perhaps I had better get the car," he suggested, "so as not to keep you waiting at the door."

"Oh, do!" said she smiling. "I'll join you directly." It was a little comedy they had played a hundred times. Almost as soon as Santini disappeared down the crowded terrace, the keen-eyed captain of waiters laid the check in front of Mrs. Sayers. He, too, knew this little comedy and acted his part to perfection. Kate scribbled her name below the staggering total, added a hundred franc note, and allowed herself to be bowed to the door, nodding to a few acquaintances on the way. At the hotel door, the racing Europa, which was scheduled to start for the Riviera that night, was purring softly. Santini at the wheel. And as they slid away into the traffic Mrs. Sayers let out a sigh.

"Oh dear!" she said. "Do you realize that this is the last day we shall have together for two whole weeks?"

"Why don't you come down and see me race?" he suggested. But Kate Sayers shook her head and shuddered.

"I couldn't bear to watch it!" she replied. "I should be sick with terror. But I'll be thinking of you every minute."

"And I" said he tenderly, "shall be thinking of how I am doing it all because of you!" Then he added casually, as if the thought had just occurred to him. "Where do we want to go now? Ah, Piron's, of course, to see the rubies!" Mrs. Sayers assented, but absently. Her mind was not, for the moment, on the ground floor of the shop.

It is going to be such a tough job for All-America selectors to think up a better halfback than Warren Heller of Pitt that maybe they won't try.

All-American pickers seldom choose two linemen from one team, but they can select Ernie Smith and Ray Brown, the Southern California tackles, and will not thereby offend me.

BOOP-BOOP PURDUE

With Koken and Heller chosen in the backfield what are you going to do about those splendid Purdue backs, Horstmann and Purritt?

You couldn't go far wrong in picking Johnny Oehler of Purdue as center. Neither could they arrest you for naming Art Kremer of Marquette. But the man who probably will get the call is Jack Robinson of Notre Dame and that guess is just as good as any.

The south seems to have four pretty good backs this semester in the persons of Beattie Feathers of Tennessee, John Cain of Alabama, Jimmy Hitchcock of Auburn and Tom Zimmerman of Tulane. By the way, the south this year offers some pretty good examples of the fact that a winning team is a great help to a young man in acquiring All-American honors.

GOOD LINE DOES HELP

Ernest ("Pug") Renter of Northwestern has had a hard year, and may be omitted from the first All-America team even though he has played harder and more effectively than he did last year. The trouble this year, we have been informed, is the fact that Northwestern's line isn't up to the gaff. Which is another example of a fact that a good strong line helps many a back to an All-American appointment.

If Mr. Newman of Michigan is not chosen as first string All-American quarterback, it will be a strange All-American club game.

The two greatest football players on a given day, that I have seen this year were Heller of Pitt against Notre Dame and Renter of Northwestern against Purdue.

WHAT'S IN A NAME?

A young man named "Gump" Asial of Auburn is one of the year's best ends. And if they had made his nickname "Airmail" he probably would be All-American stuff. Maybe he will be, anyway.

Our choice for All-American fullback will not be named. He is Broncho Nagurski of the professional Chicago Bears.

There are two brilliant sophomores in the Big Ten who will bear watching for future All-American reference purposes. One is Frank Froschner, the boy from Lincoln, Ill. (my old home town), who has been playing such a snappy backfield for Zuppke's Uilm, and giving Newman of Michigan a race for scoring honors. The other is Duane Purvis of Purdue, a young man from Mattoon, Ill.

There will be numerous compromises in the choice of tackles. Joe Kurth and Ed Krause of Notre Dame will be written on some of the tickets. Fred Crawford of Penn will get lots of votes.

ALL-AMERICA HOOK

Lew Einchman of Ohio State is some place in the running. His performance with passed against Penn was inspiring. He also has a wonderful left hook, as Burnett, Penn end, will testify.

The game he plays against Notre Dame may make Vidal of Army one of the country's outstanding quarterbacks.

Matt of Columbia and Moss of Purdue are good enough ends for anybody's selection. Operatives also send in glowing words about Sklodiany, the Pitt end; Ish Moe, Oregon State back; and Jack Manders, Minnesota fullback. But then, this is just gossip, remember.

THREE GOLF EVENTS ON WILLOWICK CARD

A series of three golf events for the week was announced today by Willowick club officials.

A best ball tournament was scheduled today with players of the South Coast Women's Golf association competing. Wednesday will be the regular women's day class and tournament. Two-ball mixed Scotch foursomes are listed for Sunday at 1 p.m.

GAME WILL BE NEXT TUESDAY

Anaheim and Brea-Olinda will play off their tie for the Orange league football championship at Fullerton next Tuesday, November 29, instead of at Anaheim Thanksgiving day.

This change in plans was announced today following a conference between Principal J. A. Clayes and Coach Dick Glover of Anaheim and Principal F. C. Harvey and Coach "Shorty" Smith of Brea-Olinda.

The league's status in the impending Southern California titular playoffs is not known although the winner of next week's contest will be eligible for the series, it is believed.

Four officials were tentatively accepted. The referee will be Harry Shee of Huntington Beach, the umpire George Baker of Santa Ana, the head linesman Clarence Bishop of Fullerton and the field judge R. M. Hager of Huntington Beach. These selections are contingent on the approval of Glen Lewis of Fullerton director of officials for the league.

When Anaheim and Brea-Olinda met during the regular season, Anaheim won, 13-0. Brea-Olinda beat the Colonists for first place when Garden Grove defeated Anaheim last Friday.

Three Saints, one Bruin on all-coast

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 22.—(INS)—Eleven "experts" who write about football for International News Service along the coast-flung Pacific slope have spoken and the mantle of fame now falls upon the broad shoulders of a number of young men.

These gridiron "authorities" were asked to open the picking season by choosing a squad on the coast which caught their eagle eyes during the past season, two points being awarded a player picked for the first team and one for landing on the second eleven.

The results follow: Slavich, Santa Clara, and Nisbet, Washington, ends; Brown, U. S. C., and Smith, U. S. C., tackles; Steponow, St. Mary's, and Corbus, Stanford, guards; Coates, U. C. L. A., center; Mohler, U. S. C., quarter; Schladach, California, and Sander, Washington, halfbacks; and Brovelli, St. Mary's, fullback.

TROY'S SQUAD OF 36 ON WAY TO SEATTLE

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22.—(UP)—The Southern California Trojans were enroute to Seattle today on the last lap of their quest for coast conference championship honors.

Thirty-six football players were in the contingent that set off last night for the Thanksgiving Day battle with the University of Washington. The first stop in the northward trek was at Sacramento where a short practice session was planned this afternoon.

The Trojans will be hampered in their endeavors to keep their 1932 slate clean by the absence of Eric Smith, giant tackle, who was stricken with influenza after the Oregon game. Smith was ordered to remain in a hospital by physicians who said he would not be able to play in the last conference game of the season.

W. C. T. U. AT EL MODENA IN REGULAR MEET

FOUNDER OF ORANGE MEN'S CLUB GIVES ILLUMINATING TALK ON EUROPE AT MEET

ORANGE, Nov. 22.—Giving impressions of conditions in Europe as he saw them on a year's tour of that continent, the Rev. Herbert Vernon Harris, rector of the Trinity Episcopal church of Los Angeles spoke before a large group at the meeting of the Men's club at the Trinity Episcopal church last night. Dinner was served at 6:30 o'clock in the parish home of the Orange Trinity Episcopal church after he was caught and confessed to his proposed crime of killing Mussolini, it was related.

The speaker declared that France led in the attitude of European countries regarding the debt attitude toward America and naturally enough, he said, other countries are quite willing to follow her example. If there is any future trouble in Europe the Rev. Mr. Harris declared, France will be found to have been at the bottom of it.

The rector said that France was the only place where he was rudely and unkindly treated of all the countries he visited and that in comparing notes with other American travelers, he had found that they had had the same experiences.

After a delightful sketch of a trip which took him and his wife from Los Angeles to New York and then through Switzerland, Germany, England, France and Italy, the speaker told of conditions as he had viewed them in Italy and England. If Mussolini lives for 10 years, Italy will be the greatest country in Europe, he declared.

Enthusiastic on the conditions prevalent in Italy, the speaker told of leaving valuable property in hotel rooms in safety for hours at a time, of the lack of beggars, of the orderly conduct of 8000 arranged for the occasion by her mother.

After a number of merry games had been in progress guests were ushered to the dining room where refreshments of ice cream and sponge cake were served. The table was beautifully appointed with glowing candles and decorations were carried out in shades of oranges. Candy baskets were in the chosen color and miniature turkey feathers were the favors.

The little hostess was presented with a number of lovely gifts. Those sharing the happy affair were Marilyn June Hughes, Mabel and Violet Walker, Norma Lee Squires, June and Loretta Sondericker, Shirley and Lois Lan Franco, Angie Nieblas, Georgia Lane Franco, Maxine Kregar, Betty Anne Rolfe of Los Angeles, and the hostess, Norma Hughes.

ORANGE, Nov. 22.—In a setting of fall cornfields, where pumpkins glowed golden between the stalks of ripened grain, the chorus of the Orange Woman's club, yesterday afternoon presented one of the most enjoyable programs ever given by the group.

Mrs. J. M. Cloyes of Santa Ana, announced the songs and gave an outline full of interest to music lovers, as she described the music of the Negro and told of his contribution to American music from the time the slaves were captured in Africa and dragged to the slave ship to the present time.

Hostesses for the afternoon, acting for members of the chorus were Mrs. B. D. Stanley, Mrs. Jack Clayton and Mrs. Donald Smiley. As the curtains were drawn across the stage the audience which filled the clubroom, saw a group of lovely octogenarians and maturesses in whom it was difficult to recognize the members of the chorus.

Mrs. Cloyes was in print silk of the fashion of the sixties and Miss Sue Scarritt who opened the program with a brief talk, was a well-dressed colored lady of distinction. The guest artist was Mrs. Will Rohrs, of Los Angeles, former member of the chorus, Mrs. Rohrs was lovely in the black lace mantilla gown and had the appearance of one of the aristocracy of the East Indies.

The Rev. Mr. McFarlane gave his first talk of the series Sunday night, when "How to Promote Revival Meetings in the Modern Church" was the topic. At this time, the Rev. H. F. Sheerer, pastor of the Orange Baptist church, exchanged pulpits with him, preaching at Calvary Baptist church in Whittier.

VANITY BRINGS ANAHEIM YOUTH TO LOCAL JAIL

Louis Mancinas, 20, resident of South Claudia street, Anaheim, likes to "smell good," and because perfume is his hobby, he is today in the Orange county jail, booked for burglary.

John Kahlen Jr., resident of South street in Anaheim, returned to his home Sunday afternoon with his family after a ride. When he entered the house, he noticed a strong odor of perfume throughout the house. After accusing the children of "robbing" the perfume bottle, Kahlen discovered a window open at the side of the house.

Further investigation showed footprints outside the window and then Kahlen discovered a man walking away from the house. He hurriedly overtook him, Mancinas,

FORM STATE F. B. CITRUS DEPARTMENT

Organization of a state Farm Bureau citrus department at the recent California Farm Bureau Federation conference in Marysville was completed over the opposition of delegates from the Orange County Farm Bureau, according to R. D. Flaherty, secretary of the local organization. N. C. Kelly of Corona was elected chairman of the newly created department.

Opposition to formation of a state citrus department at this time was expressed by the Orange county delegation because of the condition of the citrus industry and the fact that it might detract from a marketing survey being conducted now, it was explained by Flaherty. This opposition was aimed to delay formation of the department this year only, Flaherty said.

Captain Edward Page Gaston, world war veteran and writer, is commander of the first unit of the new organization, which, operating on a military basis with posts and garrisons throughout the country, will enlist the active cooperation of chambers of commerce and the membership of the American Legion, it was announced. The American War Association, the Department of Justice, Boy Scouts, the Girl Scouts and other organizations will be asked to lend their assistance in breaking up organized crime.

Call Convention

Declaring that taxation will be the major issue before the next legislature, and that "not a single constructive suggestion for a tax program has yet been made," Lieutenant Governor Frank F. Merriam has called for a state-wide tax convention to meet in Sacramento next January.

Merriam would have the convention composed of representatives of all taxpaying groups who would work out a program for consideration by the legislature.

Merriam indicated that, because of repeal of the Wright Act, he would name a majority of "wets" on the public morals committee, which had been "dry" since the Eighteenth amendment was enacted.

SACRAMENTO, Calif., Nov. 22.—(UPI)—Despite the Democratic victories in Southern California's legislative election, Walter J. Little of Santa Monica is definitely slated for speaker of the assembly.

Of the 80 members of the assembly, 50 have signed promises to vote for Little, and 13 others have orally assured him of their support.

Assemblymen Percy G. West of Sacramento county will probably be chosen speaker pro tem, as he has been pledged the backing of the Little forces.

On the senate side, the veteran Senator Arthur H. Breed of Oakland, president pro tem, is promising serious opposition in the form of Senator W. P. Rich of Marysville, choice of the rural solons who are now in the saddle.

$11,888 DAMAGES DEMANDED OF P. E.

Injured more than a year ago in an automobile-street car crash at Garden Grove, Jesus Garcia has filed suit in superior court seeking judgment for $11,888 damages. The Pacific Electric Railway company and the motorman of the car involved, were named defendants in the action.

Garcia, who was driving the automobile at the time of the crash, was seriously injured and his automobile demolished. He received two compound fractures of the hip and leg, internal injuries and lacerations of the head and shoulders.

He charged in his damage action that the motorman, whose name is unknown to him, was operating the car in a careless, reckless and negligent manner when it crossed a highway at Garden Grove and struck his automobile which he was driving across the railroad right of way.

THIS DEMOCRATIC ROOSEVELT

Being the Life Story of President-Elect Frank Delano Roosevelt

By Leland M. Ross and Allan W. Grobin

(This intimate story of the life of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, beginning with the time his father took him as a 5-year-old to call on his close friend, Grover Cleveland, then President of the United States,引起 the reader through an interesting boyhood on the family farm at Hyde Park, N. Y., his student days at Groton, Harvard, and Columbia Law School, and the development of his political career, which began with a New York state senatorship. This biography is entirely authentic. The previous issue told how F. D. with state senator led a successful revolt against Tammany Boss Murphy's order to elect William Sheehan to the U. S. Senate, he continued his fight against Murphy and bossism at the 1912 Democratic National Convention at Baltimore, and worked for Wilson's nomination. The first ballot was 440-1-2 for Champ Clark, speaker of the house, and 324 for Wilson.)

INSTALMENT SEVEN

Boss Murphy considered Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, but Alabama was too far south; he considered everyone who might beat Bryan. And always he arrived at the awful fact that the Clark forces were his only chance.

Finally on the tenth ballot, Murphy shifted New York's ninety votes to Clark. The speaker polled 556 to Wilson's 350 1-2. Clark enthusiasts, preparing for the avalanche, paraded through the snow. But the stampede failed to arrive.

By the twenty-fourth ballot, Wilson's strength was accumulating. On the twenty-fifth Indiana's 39 votes shifted from Governor Thomas R. Marshall to Wilson. Roger Sullivan's 58 Illinois delegates followed suit; and Roosevelt's plot against the Murphy-Sullivan-Taggart entente was at last accomplished.

F. D. and his colleagues took advantage of the moment and launched an even more intense drive on the floor of the convention for the presidency. On a platform of anti-bossmanship!

In the ensuing campaign, Senator F. D. mixed his own defiance of bosses in general with vigorous stumping for Governor Wilson. In November he found both himself and Wilson elected. He settled down in Albany, but when, on March 4, 1913, Wilson was inaugurated, he asked F. D. to come to Washington as Assistant Secretary of the Navy under Secretary Josephine Daniels.

Roosevelt resigned from the senate and accepted the post. Louis Howe gave up his position on the New York Herald to accompany him as his assistant. Mrs. Roosevelt, F. D. and Howe packed up and went to the capital city to live.

Roosevelt's new job did not mean that the fight against Murphy was ended. In Washington Tammany's applications for appointments were sent through his hands. Some of them were ignored. And a year later, when New York prepared to elect a United States senator by popular vote for the first time, F. D. entered the primaries in opposition to the Wigwam's candidate.

"As the Home Taxi Cab company is carrying on a price cutting campaign which directly damages the Santa Ana bus service I must protest against their continued operation in defiance of the law," his letter said.

"The bus losses have increased each week since open price cutting has been in progress. I have sustained losses much of the time for the past three years and am willing to continue to take losses caused by depression, but to have the business ruined by open law violators, offers no incentive for me to continue," he said.

tory Wall Street Interests."

The threat electrified the convention. Wilson passed Clark on the thirtieth ballot; and by the forty-fourth Roosevelt knew the fight was won. Nomination seemed so certain that Tammany delegates were in a fury.

"Shall we do it now?" "Wait until Alabama changes," said Murphy; and he cast ninety votes for Clark once more.

On the forty-sixth ballot, Underwood or Alabama, first on the roll call, swung to Wilson. The convention followed and it was the New Jersey governor, 990 to 84. Governor Marshall of Indiana was selected as running mate on the second ballot.

Murphy, when Alabama had changed, had wanted to dispense with a ballot and make it by acclamation. Clark partisans would not have it. Murphy pranced about like a wild man. In his desperate efforts to beat Bryan and avoid Hearst, he had started a furor back home. Wall street interests were furious at the victory of Wilson; and progressive Democrats were raging because of New York's ludicrous wobbling and final support of Clark. He realized that he was in a tight place. He gushed good will. Even Franklin D. Roosevelt was sprouting wings.

Murphy affably patted the Dutchess senator on the back and twisting his lips into a smile, told him:

On August 5 the followers of Theodore Roosevelt met in Chicago, formed the Progressive or Bull Moose party, and unanimously nominated Franklin D.'s uncle-in-law and cousin as their candidate for the presidency. On a platform of anti-bossmanship!

In the ensuing campaign, Senator F. D. mixed his own defiance of bosses in general with vigorous stumping for Governor Wilson. In November he found both himself and Wilson elected. He settled down in Albany, but when, on March 4, 1913, Wilson was inaugurated, he asked F. D. to come to Washington as Assistant Secretary of the Navy under Secretary Josephine Daniels.

Roosevelt resigned from the senate and accepted the post. Louis Howe gave up his position on the New York Herald to accompany him as his assistant. Mrs. Roosevelt, F. D. and Howe packed up and went to the capital city to live.

Roosevelt's new job did not mean that the fight against Murphy was ended. In Washington Tammany's applications for appointments were sent through his hands. Some of them were ignored. And a year later, when New York prepared to elect a United States senator by popular vote for the first time, F. D. entered the primaries in opposition to the Wigwam's candidate.

"I stand on my own feet," he said, "to challenge once more the rule of this state by Boss Charles F. Murphy."

He obtained three weeks' leave without pay—and returned to New York for his campaign.

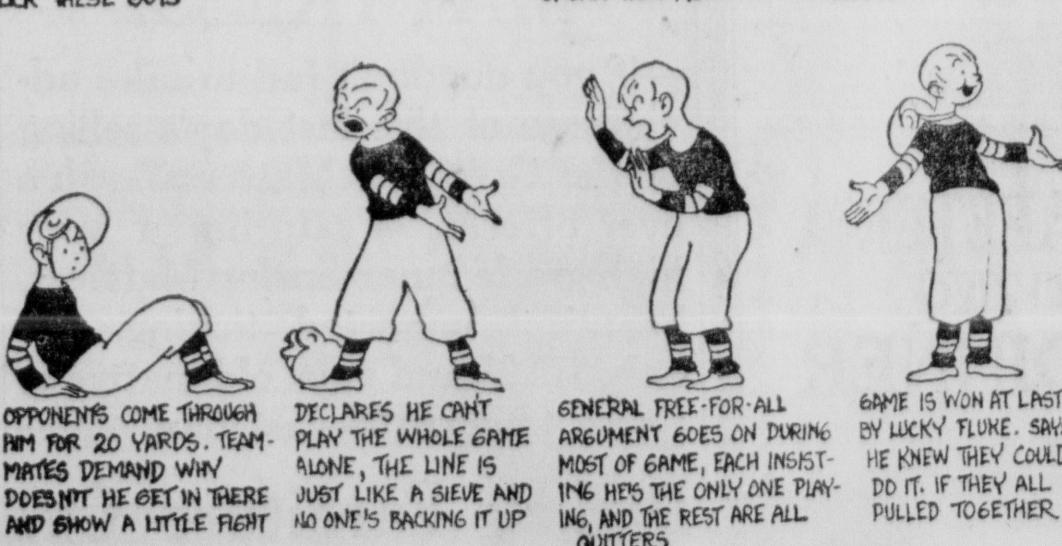

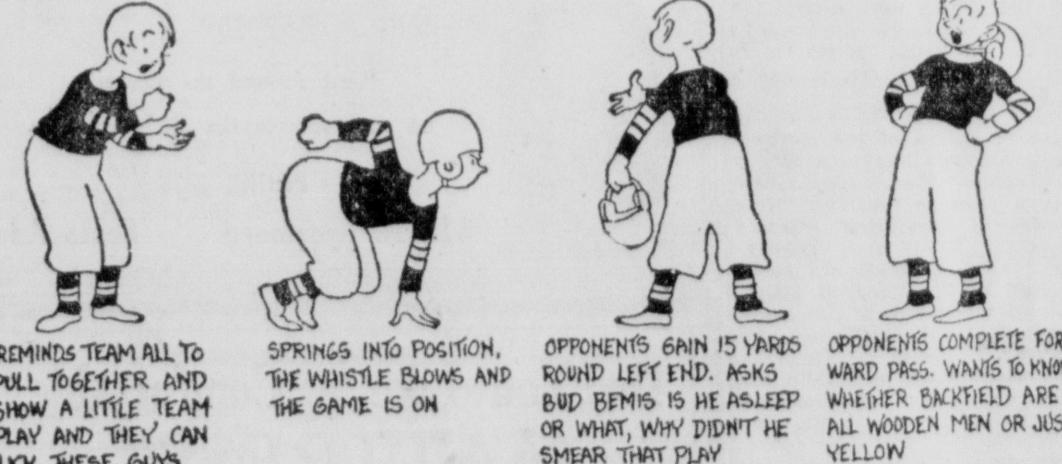

It was a characteristic struggle. Wily Murphy had named James W. Gerard, President Wilson's own ambassador to Germany, who was widely popular. John A. Hennessy

COMPLIMENTS OF THE BLIZZARD!

How would you like the job of getting these cars started? The Great Lakes region and much of the middle west were blanketed deeply with snow by a storm which extended from Idaho to the Ohio valley and from North Dakota to Texas. In Toledo, Ohio, snowfall was especially heavy, as the owners of these autos found out when they came to get them. Many Ohio and Michigan towns were isolated by the early blizzard.

INTERESTING AND VALUABLE COLLECTION OF FIREARMS OWNED BY SANTA ANA DOCTOR

By ARVID GILMOUNT

Perhaps nowhere outside a museum or a dealer's shop is it possible to find a finer collection of firearms in Southern California than that owned by Dr. Roy Seaton Horton of this city, which numbering several hundred pieces, ranging from Arabian flintlocks and buccaneers' pistols to sinister looking frontier guns and comparatively modern sixshooters, is valued at close to $5000.

In addition to his firearms collection, which has received official recognition by the Who's Who of the collecting world, Dr. Horton is collecting ammunition, showing the development from the cartridge of fire to the modern center fire metallic shells.

Dr. Horton acquired his hobby when a boy of eight years of age, his first piece being an old French muzzle gun which he later traded for two other guns. Since that time, with an enthusiasm that would have done credit to a Morgan or Huntington, the Santa Ana optician has built up a collection of odd looking firearms that is envied of connoisseurs.

The collection has been properly catalogued under classifications adopted by standard collections, and has been exhibited in various places on the coast.

Arabian Flintlock

In all the realm of small arms none is more picturesque than the Arabian flintlock pistols, made entirely of brass or other metal to prevent termites or other insects from eating up the stock. Included in the Horton collection is one of these unusual weapons. While no marks of identification is given, it is believed that it saw service in the seventeenth century.

Reminiscent of "the wild and wooly west" when Jesse James and his gang of outlaws made the highways unsafe for stage coaches, is a Manhattan cap and ball pistol, once the property of Charlie Ford, famous western gunfighter who killed Jesse James. There are not less than 19 notches on the grip of the gun, which the present owner believes, figured in many a gun fight.

Mute testimony to many a fight on the high seas where quarter was neither asked nor given is a heavy buccaneer's pistol of the type that Captain Kidd wore in his sash when leading his freebooters into action. The specimen owned by Dr. Horton is one of the best motes of the collection.

Rare Weapon

Said to be one of but seven in existence is an old Springfield cavalry pistol, caliber .50, manufactured in 1863. Because of the huge caliber of the gun and resulting recoil and kickback of the weapon, it was deemed dangerous, and after a few experiments, its manufacture was ordered discontinued. The gun fires a center-fire, metallic cartridge and is equipped with the regular Springfield lock of the model of 1873, U. S. Army rifle.

Part of the interesting collection has been on display in various show windows here, and many of the weapons are on display in special cases in Dr. Horton's office.

Double Shower Held for Women

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Nov. 22.—A surprise shower complimenting Mesdames E. Hackett and S. M. Bathgate of San Juan Capistrano, was given recently at a party at the home of Mrs. Aron Buchheim.

The afternoon entertainment consisted of several very clever readings, games, and the unwrapping of the many gifts which were presented the honorees.

The guests were served refreshments, at tables which were beautifully decorated in pink and white, amid varicolored gladioli, by the hostess, Mrs. Aron Buchheim, and the co-hostesses Mesdames Guy Williams, Clayton Landreth and William Bathgate. Forty guests attended the party.

Another feature of the Horton collection is a number of Colt and Smith and Wesson revolvers, tracing the development of the arm from early issues to up-to-date models.

Another gem treasured by Dr. Horton is a strange piece, a revolver designed by Colonel Le Mat, a French cavalry officer who came to New Orleans during the Civil War. This gun has facilities for 9-shots in the upper barrel and a single shot in the lower, a combination of a 9-shot pistol and a shotgun which operates cap and ball fashion from two barrels. The gun was used by the Confederates during the Civil War.

Another feature of their program was lantern slides, in one of which Miss Hill appeared. They also demonstrated some of the native customs, using native dress.

A feature of their program was lantern slides, in one of which Miss Hill appeared. They also demonstrated some of the native customs, using native dress.

A charming affair honoring Miss Delia Hampton, whose engagement and approaching marriage to Jack Patterson were announced some time ago, was given recently when Mrs. Clyde W. Higgins entertained in her home in Orange. Mrs. Higgins' husband is a cousin to Miss Hampton.

Autumn flowers were attractive arrangements throughout the rooms of the home. Guests took part in an especially enjoyable feature of the afternoon when they wrote notes to Miss Hampton, predicting events to take place in her life during the next several years.

Jaysee Student Loan Fund Benefits by Bridge Party

Attributing the success of the benefit bridge party to the charming hospitality afforded by Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Nealey in whose Tustin home members of Las Gitanas entertained Saturday evening, members of that Jaysee service club today were rejoicing in the fact that it was possible for them to turn over a nice sum of money to the student loan fund for which the affair was given.

When guests arrived they were greeted by the Misses Kay Bennett, Irene Ross and Virginia Warner and ushered into rooms embellished with large baskets of poinsettias and coteenaster. Tables were of autumn leaves and at the end of the contest, George Wells was presented with a bill fold for holding the highest score and Miss Edith Pithie, a reading lamp for women's high score.

At the refreshment hour card tables were covered with dainty luncheon cloths and each centered with a slender taper around which were placed strands of coteenaster. Serving was accomplished by the Misses Pauline Wells, Mary Nalle, Kay Bennett, Katherine Robbins and "Betty" Vorce. Miss Maxine Clark and Miss Martha Humes also assisted.

In charge of the affair were Miss Martha Humes, tickets; Miss Dorothy Ensign, refreshments and Miss Jean Rockwell, decorations.

Surprise Disclosure is Promised Patrons of Yule Barn Program

Mr. and Mrs. Ethan Louderback, 510 Winteria place, had as weekend guests, Mr. and Mrs. William Walker of Los Angeles.

Mrs. Olive Lopez and her niece, Miss Cleora Fine returned last night to Hollywood after having spent the week end here with Mrs. Lopez' sister, Mrs. George W. Young, 1818 North Main street, and Miss Fine's sister, Mrs. Ruby Luberry, 1002 North Broadway.

The Rev. and Mrs. C. F. Martin, of the November social committee, with Miss Lorraine French, chairwoman, Mrs. Rose Walker and Mrs. Ruth Seudder, the program was one of variety and charm, opening with musical numbers by piano pupils of Miss Carolyn Heughton.

Mrs. Haughton prefaced her introduction of the young artists with a brief talk in which she quoted a saying by Plato regarding the importance that music has in our lives.

She introduced the pianists in turn, Miss Beaule, Miss Virginia Adams, Miss Ruby Moore and Miss Frances Walton, and the soprano soloist, Irma Huffmon May.

The resultant program was one of keen pleasure for the club-women, who were appreciative of the technique and skill displayed by each young piano artist in turn, and the lovely qualities of Mrs. May's voice.

Numbers played were a Chopin Waltz, opus 18, by Miss Purkey; Dubussey's "Golliwog's Cakewalk"; by Miss "Percy Granger" arrangement of Brahms "Lullaby" by Miss Moore, and "The Two Larks" by Leszczyczynski, by Miss Walton, all played from memory, and each given with expression and a correct understanding of its theme.

Mrs. May's solos, heard at intervals on the program, were beautifully sung and were accompanied by Miss Haughton. They were "Toujours L'Amour" by Frim, and "Woodman's 'A Birthday'" and in connection with the little play with which the evening concluded, "Love's Old Sweet Song" and "Be He Me If All Those Endearing Young Charms."

Mrs. L. B. Beaman, director of the Tustin Community Players presented three members of that organization in the entertaining one act, "Second Thought" by Bea Bradley Willis.

Members of the cast have appeared in various successful features of the Tustin Players, and showed a pleasing familiarity with dramatic technique in the manner in which they presented the clever little play, whose action took place in the "Bluebird Beauty shop."

Miss Margery Burns as "Babe," Miss Louise Vance as "Billie," and Mrs. Arthur Witten as "Mrs. Cleverden" did extremely nice work both individually and collectively, and like the musicians of the evening, were warmly applauded by the interested clubwomen.

Mr. Phillip Lutz of 1712 Valencia street, whom illness has confined to her bed for the past week, is reported getting along satisfactorily.

Mr. and Mrs. T. F. McGilvray of the Santa Ana Country club were Long Beach visitors yesterday.

Miss Minnie M. Besser, who has been confined to her home with illness for the past two weeks, was able to sit up today, according to members of her family at 2042 North Ross street.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Platt, 416 South Birch street, welcomed a week end visitor from their son-in-law and daughter, Lieutenant and Mrs. John D. Shaw of San Diego. The Plate were to return to San Diego with their guests to spend Thanksgiving in the southern city.

Miss Sherrill Spurgeon and George Rice III were here from Scripps college and Los Angeles, respectively, to spend the week end with Miss Spurgeon's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Spurgeon Jr., 1617 North Main street.

Both were among Saturday evening patrons at the local Community play.

Miss Margaret Fallon of Houston, Tex., who is spending the winter in Santa Ana, plans a visit of several days with her cousin, Miss Nettie McComb, in Long Beach.

Mrs. S. W. H. Ward of 1003 North Broadway, is making a short visit with an eastern friend now residing in Long Beach.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry W. Guthrie, 824 North Olive street, returned Saturday afternoon from a two week's trip in the desert, spending a week in Morongo valley and visiting Palm Springs, the date gardens in Coachella valley, in Indio and Riverside. They also spent some time in San Fernando and Randsburg.

Mrs. Fred W. Timm, 1215 Orange avenue, is convalescing nicely from a major operation which she underwent a few weeks ago at Santa Ana Valley hospital. She is recuperating in her home here.

Mrs. R. D. Crenshaw, 2815 Santiago avenue, underwent an operation for appendicitis Saturday at Hollywood hospital. She is reported as doing nicely.

Ralph Smedley, president of the association, presided over the meeting. Plans were made for increasing the attendance at the Harry Lauder program to be presented here December 1.

Tahiti Life, Customs Described for Ebell Travelers

Opportunity to further their knowledge of Tahiti and their year's study of South Sea Islands, was afforded women of Ebells Second Travel section yesterday, when they had the pleasure of entertaining Henry L. Sherman of Balboa, who talked on his experiences in Tahiti.

Section members assembled in Ebells club house for luncheon in advance of the 2 o'clock program. The luncheon was made a very pleasant social feature by three hostesses, Mrs. Elmer Barr Burns, Mrs. C. F. Cross and Mrs. M. C. Williams.

Mrs. George Ames as program chairman, had arranged for various school numbers, to which the Fifth Grade chorus contributed "Home on the Range" and "Pilgrim Maidens;" the harmonica band played "O Susanna," "Spanish Folksong" and "The Wreck of the Old 97." Miss Miller, school nurse was speaker of the afternoon, and gave a very interesting talk on underweight children, describing causes of underweight and measures for correcting it.

Repairing to the clubhouse auditorium section members were joined by many guests for a very entertaining and instructive program opened with musical features planned by Mrs. Harry N. Hayes. To this prelude, Miss Hazel Stukely contributed two songs, winning much acclaim for her clear and beautiful soprano voice and her ability as an artist.

Chapter members were served a tea menu from a table hand-some with appropriate fall decoration of fruits.

Church Societies

Circle Meeting

Election of new officers was a feature of the pleasant meeting of Susan Wesley circle of Surgeon Methodist Missionary society held recently in the home of Mrs. C. M. Aker, 912 Garfield street. Mrs. Nettie G. Woodward was named president; Mrs. Ruth Griffith, vice president and Mrs. Martha Wiesman, secretary.

Rose from the gardens of the Aker home, had been used in decorating the room for the occasion. Mrs. A. A. Jones led devotions, after which Mrs. Joseph Thacker of Orange gave a mission study lesson from the book "Facing the Future in Indian Missions."

During the enjoyable social hour which followed the program, refreshments of fruitade and cake were served by the hostess.

Class Party

Mrs. Fred Wilson's home on Lemon Heights was scene of an enjoyable party held on a recent evening by members of Mrs. Thomas Blair's Sunday school class of the First Presbyterian church.

Chrysanthemums in deep full hues, decked the rooms of the project.

An entertaining program given during the afternoon included readings by Ernest Crozier Phillips and a group of Japanese songs given by Miss Janice Campbell.

Those in charge of the affair were Mesdames Fred Wilson, Fred Newcomb, H. V. Carse, Harrison, White, J. D. Campbell and Ben Johnson.

Refreshments were served at the close of the afternoon.

Calvary Missionary

Miss R. Celeste Churchill, founder and manager of the Calvary Home for Girls in Los Angeles, gave an interesting talk concerning her work at last week's all-day meeting of the Woman's Missionary society of Calvary church held in the home of Mrs. Milo B. Allen, Garden Grove.

The speaker stated that 540 different girls have been given a temporary Christian home and care and aid in finding employment. The home was started twelve years ago in a five-room bungalow and at the present time there are three buildings containing 21 rooms, used in this splendid work.

During the business session at which the president, Mrs. Louis J. Gall, presided, it was voted to give a quilt to the Malmstrom for use in their mission home.

At noon, a covered dish luncheon was served with Mrs. George Taylor, Miss Ruth Allen, and Mrs. Frank E. Lindgren assisting Mrs. Allen in hostess duties.

Members of the North section of the Woman's Aid of the First Methodist church were entertained Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. J. C. Flack, North Main street. Mrs. Leo Myers, president, was in charge.

Mrs. S. M. Davis, program chairman, took charge of the meeting, after devotionals had been led by Mrs. Louis Allen. Mrs. John Clarkson gave as readings, "King Solomon of Kentucky," "Give Thanks for What" and "Thanksgiving." Mrs. Grow Brown spoke in behalf of the Goodwill Industries, urging members to give bread instead of toys this year for Christmas.

The occasion was especially enjoyable because it marked the 42nd wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Flack.

Concluding the afternoon, the hostess served pumpkin pie topped with whipped cream. The December meeting is to be held in the home of Mrs. Frank Stockebrand.

Hear Fine Program

Songs, solo dances, piano numbers and an address went into the making of a program of pleasing variety presented at a meeting of Franklin school Parent-Teacher association in the school last week.

Ray Adkinson, speaker, chose as his subject, "Safety," a topic which later was discussed by Miss Rowena Newcomb, representing the teachers, and by Mrs. Harris, on behalf of the mothers. A descriptive song was offered by the third graders, a dance following by Miss Lois Marie Harmon, Mrs. Starkey concluding the musical program with a piano selection.

It was announced that a pot-luck dinner would be held following school, December 13, for all parents and friends of the school.

Lowell Program

Last week's meeting of Lowell P.T.A. in the school kindergarten, gave members of the association a most interesting program following the business session conducted by Mrs. Dale Griggs, president.

Nurses' Association
Is Entertained at County Hospital

When District 16 of the California Nurses' association met Friday evening in the nurses' home of Orange county hospital, the members had the pleasure of entertaining as guest speaker, Mrs. F. E. Coulter of Santa Ana, president of the Women's auxiliary to the California Medical association.

The Value of the Women's Auxiliary to the Medical Profession" offered Mrs. Coulter the theme of her interesting address, in which she explained that the chief value in this group of physicians' wives lay in its being an educational connection between the medical profession and the layman.

She also developed other lines applying more directly to her audience, including the opportunities for nurses, including cultural ones and saying "it is not what you have, but what you have done with what you have, that is of paramount importance."

She encouraged a triangular development of physical, mental and spiritual qualities, and incidentally urged upon her audience the need of acquiring hobbies as a means of avoiding getting into professional ruts. In concluding her interesting address, she said "The Great Master came into the world that we might live more abundantly. If one realizes this, and lives her life accordingly she will unfold like a flower."

A short business session followed the address, and then the three hostesses, Miss Grace Lansing, Miss Anne Ebinger and Mrs. Julia Salisbury of the hospital staff, presided at the truly social part of the pleasant evening.

Refreshments were served from a table charmingly arranged with scarlet poinsettias and candelabra each bearing six glowing red candles, rising from the handsome cloth of Italian cutwork. The refreshments, reflecting the note of holiday cheer, were served by the preliminary students of the Orange county training school for nurses.

Present in addition to the honor guest, Mrs. Coulter, and two other visitors, Miss Cora B. Weltman and Miss Leila Fernald, were the following members of the Nurses' association, Mesdames Mabel H. Balch, Elizabeth Eisenbraun, Helen M. Nelson, Anna Allen, Ellen Smith and Mabel Bennett; the Misses Elsie Bennett, Lillian Manuel, Margaret Blew, Louise Aiken, Berenice Winkelhake, Iola Bair, Maria Best, Gertrude Schroeder, Dolores Hernandez, Elizabeth Praeuer, Agnes Campbell, Leonora Carmody, Jeannette Graper, Emma Steene, Anna Stolpe, and the hostess trio, Miss Lansing, Miss Ebinger and Mrs. Salisbury.

Willard P.-T. A. Gives Successful Revue

A pleasing success and a warm reception from their audience rewarded young people who Friday night presented "Varieties of 1932" under the auspices of Frances Willard P.-T. A., in Willard auditorium.

Maudie L. Putnam and Eleanor Putnam of the Putnam School of the Dance, directed the entertainment, and presented some clever Hollywood children as well as those from this city. Treble Clef members and the Spanish orchestra co-operated, the former with sextet numbers and the latter with the charming "Una Noche en Espana." Boys of the Willard stage crew were commended for their painstaking work in shifting scenes and arranging for the colorful stage effects.

Santa Anans Included Among Dinner Guests

Mr. and Mrs. J. Russell Bruff and their son, Stephen Bruff, 702 South Broadway, were among the guests at Deauville Beach club Friday night when Mr. and Mrs. Fred C. Woodson of Los Angeles were hosts at a dinner dance of unusual charm.

The harmony of the dance music seemed to pervade all details of the intimate little private party, at which Mr. and Mrs. Woodson entertained in addition to Mr. and Mrs. Bruff and Stephen Bruff, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rew, Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Kelly, and Miss June Woodson, Los Angeles, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Purdum of San Marino.

The MIXING BOWL by ANN MEREDITH

Here's New Spaghetti Dish

Today's rediscovered recipe will be:

SPAGHETTI WITH LIVER-ITALIAN

2 tablespoons fat
1-4 cup chopped onion
1 cup beef or veal liver, cubed or ground
1 teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1-2 cup tomato pulp
1-2 cup uncooked spaghetti
3 cups water
1 teaspoon minced parsley
2 tablespoons grated cheese

—Mrs. R. L. B.
Brown the onion in the fat, add the cubed liver, tomato pulp and various seasonings, cook slowly for 10 minutes. Cook the spaghetti in salted water, drain and rinse in hot water, then place on platter and pour the liver stew over the spaghetti. Sprinkle the top with minced parsley and bake in a medium quick oven.

The recipe makes about 4 1-2 dozen cookies.

Each cookie contains a trifle over 100 calories, and such calories! Strong enough to wreck the most perfect 36 that walks today, if indulged in injudiciously. That means that the adult should eat these delicious things with due discretion. Children may have lots of them, and thrive on them.

Wednesday's recipe will detail the making of a fluffy pudding sauce to be used with dark steamed puddings or some of the bread puddings you can make out of stale bread.

Woodmas Home Decked As Log Cabin for "49ers Party"

A theme as novel as any chosen in some period for an entertainment governed decorations for the party given Friday evening by Jess McKee and Marlin Woodmas in the Woodmas home at 918 Fairview street.

Planning a "49-ers Log Cabin party," the hosts had gone to considerable lengths to make an appropriate setting of the Woodmas residence, decorating with tree branches, with lighted candles and lanterns, and with appropriate mottoes, the latter hung about the walls. A "log cabin camp fire" completed the scene.

Tables were arranged for 500, at which guests passed a merry evening, concluded when an old spinning wheel was spun and prizes subsequently bestowed upon Mrs. Pearl Woodyard, Mrs. Arla De Hart and Mrs. Alice Garlick.

An appropriate supper course was then served Mr. and Mrs. Arla De Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Tathwell; Mesdames Alice Garlick, M. M. Kaufman and Pearl Woodyard; Miss Milma Garlick, Miss Muriel Woodyard; Percy Woodmas and the two hosts, Jess McKee and Marlin Woodmas.

City Offices Reviewed In Club's Roll Call

A novel means of responding to roll call was introduced by members of the Stitch and Chatter club when this group met last week with Mrs. Josephine Antisdal at 412 Halesworth street. Members answered by naming city officials, and the offices held and salaries drawn in each case.

A new pencil game which members titled "concealed abbreviations" afforded much amusement and occupied a good part of the afternoon.

Mrs. J. H. Antisdal, daughter-in-law of the hostess, brought quantities of yellow baby chrysanthemums from her own gardens, and combined these with purple sage in decorating. Refreshments of pumpkin pie, home-made cookies and coffee were served on individual trays, each prettily arranged with white doily, napkin of Thanksgiving design and tiny bouquets of baby chrysanthemums and smilax.

Members of the club, who will meet next with Mrs. Harold Bishop, 330 West Nineteenth street, includes Mesdames W. W. Adamson, Harold Dawson, J. W. Hancock, E. J. Naish, Starr Ozment, Walter Ozment, Mary Rogers, Allie Ward, J. F. Weekly, Miss Miriam Adamson and the hostess, Mrs. Josephine Antisdal.

The recipe makes about 4 1-2 dozen cookies.

THE TINYMITES

STORY BY HAL COCHRAN — PICTURES BY KING

When Scouty rode right out of sight upon the squirrel, each tinymite that had been left behind sat down to rest a little while.

"The squirrel moves at a speedy gait," said Windy. "We'll sit here and wait till it comes back. Then we'll all ride around for 'bout a mile."

"For goodness sakes," said Copy, "you think of a lot of things to do, but it is more than likely that the squirrel will be tired out."

"We'll have to let it rest a bit before we take our turns on it." Then and, far in the distance, they all heard a merry shout.

"It's Scouty," shouted Duncy. "He seems just as cheerful as can be. I guess he managed to hang on despite a lot of bumps."

"I hope that we can do as well, but that is something we can't tell. I only know that little squirrel jumps and jumps and jumps."

Then Scouty rode right into sight. He shouted, "I am quite all right. The ride I had was dandy. Who is going to follow me?"

Said Windy, "Oh, we think it best to let the kind squirrel have a rest." The squirrel, however, said, "Oh, no! I'm fresh as fresh can be."

So all the Tinies had their fun at riding and when this was done, the squirrel exclaimed, "Let's go to my home. Quite a sight you'll see."

"I have two baby squirrels and they just dearly love to dance and play!" The squirrels soon were brought out. They were as cute as they could be.

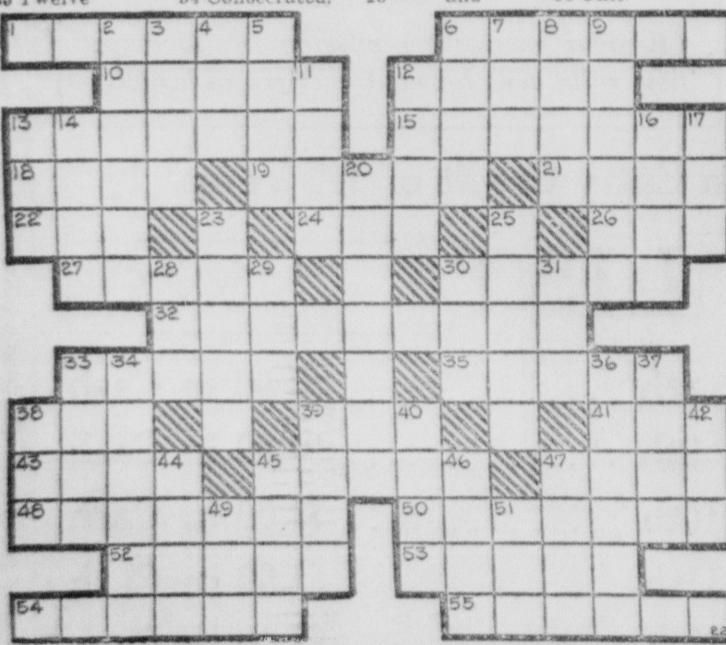

The Tinies crawled up on a limb and Copy said, "If they're in trim, please let them do a dance for us in the open air."

The mother squirrel replied, "All right." The dance went on, and what a sight. "My gracious."

The LONELY FIRST LADY of MANCHUKUO

One dark winter night she was placed in a palanquin hung with imperial yellow trappings, and carried into the Forbidden City. . . . There, in a ceremony at 2 o'clock in the morning, she became the bride of the Son of Heaven.

By DOROTHY GOULD

Hsinking, Manchukuo.
(Changchun, Manchuria.)

I HAVE just had an interview with the lovely, lonely First Lady of Manchukuo, the first interview which she has granted to any foreigner since her husband—the former Boy Emperor of China—became chief executive of this new far eastern republic.

As all the world knows, the state of Manchukuo, youngest of the world's commonwealths, and born of Japan's successful military campaign last fall in Manchuria, just recently was officially recognized by Japan in a treaty which calls for a defensive military alliance and marks the first recognition of the new nation by a foreign power.

There are 400,000 square miles of territory in Manchukuo, and a population of 30,000,000. War is raging in many parts of the state. Japan's act of recognition has had repercussions all over the world, and China is especially bitter.

When I arrived at Hsinking, this little railway town which has been made the capital of the new republic, I had already made preliminary arrangements with Japanese and Chinese officials to be presented to Her Excellency, as she is now called here. But before seeing her it was necessary also to gain the consent of her Manchu courtiers.

THESE members of the old imperial court, who still regard Henry Pu Yi as the Son of Heaven and who have stayed with him for 20 years through abdication and exile, insist upon preserving the dignity of the royal family.

Moreover, as Oriental women are expected to be neither seen nor heard, it was entirely against their ideas of propriety to permit their empress to talk for publication.

But the foreign office of Manchukuo has succeeded in modifying the royal etiquette so that it does not seriously interfere any more with the democratic requirements of the new state. For example, the Manchu courtiers first insisted that anyone who requested an audience with the ex-emperor must wait one week before seeing him, but this demand has been reduced now to a delay of 24 hours.

To interview Pu Yi's wife, however, there was the further question of obtaining a suitable interpreter. In six years' residence in Peking, I have learned to speak enough Mandarin for practical purposes, but my vocabulary is lacking entirely in the polite phrases required to address an empress. None of the Manchu ladies in attendance on Her Excellency speaks a word of English, and it was unheard-of that she should use a man as interpreter.

Mr. Choichi Ohashi, the former Japanese consul general at Los Angeles who became vice minister of foreign affairs of Manchukuo, succeeded in this instance, however, in arranging for the ex-emperor's own official interpreter to serve his wife, and the interview finally was set for 3 o'clock in the afternoon.

THE interpreter, a youthful Chinese who was born in Russia and educated in Japan, called at my hotel in one of the state automobiles. We started out, only to be held up at the first street crossing by a cordon of soldiers who were clearing the road to permit Pu Yi's own automobile to drive this way.

Conditions are still so unsettled in Manchukuo that the danger of assassination is ever-present and the chief executive does not venture outside his mansion without having all the streets on his route barred to traffic.

While waiting for Pu Yi's car to pass, I endeavored to find out from my interpreter just how many wives had accompanied the Son of Heaven to Hsinking. It is a matter of history that all Chinese emperors maintained harems and that when Pu Yi left Peking he had, in addition to his empress, at least one concubine. For the past eight years the royal family had lived as refugees in the Japanese concession in Tientsin where, it was rumored, Pu Yi had taken another concubine or two.

Mr. Ohashi that morning had been evasive concerning this royal harem.

"You'd better not say anything about the chief executive's family," he advised. "It might make him angry."

Henry Pu Yi, once the "boy emperor" of China, now chief executive of the world's newest commonwealth.

THE interpreter was more explicit. He said Pu Yi had only one wife in Hsinking. She had been born in Port Arthur, in the Japanese leased territory, and she spoke Japanese fluently.

On the strength of the interpreter's information, I asked the empress if she enjoyed speaking Japanese, and she replied, "I speak no Japanese at all." I asked her if she had been glad to return to Port Arthur, and she said, "I have never been there before."

The interpreter appeared rather embarrassed when he translated these replies, and said, "I must have been mistaken in what I told you."

It is an open secret, however, that Pu Yi and his empress, whose marriage 10 years ago was arranged without the consent of either, have never been congenial, and the probability is that Pu Yi has taken a Japanese educated concubine while living under Japanese protection during the past eight years, and this lady may be

She explained that when it was decided that the new state of Manchukuo should be a republic instead of a monarchy, she put aside her Manchu court gowns and, since Manchukuo is too young to have its own traditional costumes, she adopted the prevailing Chinese styles.

Her manner, vivacious, almost pert, fits the fashion of the hour, and except for her make-up, she might pass for any of the Chinese debutantes whom one meets at Shanghai.

Her straight black hair, which has a reddish tinge most unusual in the Orient, hangs in a long bob over her stylish high collar, and her speech and gestures are informal. But the two rigid circles of rouge on her cheeks and her sharply outlined lips preserve a fashion that became obsolete in China 20 years ago when the monarchy fell.

But Mrs. Pu Yi's smile is so gay and her manners so charming that it is hard to realize that her artificial make-up really is more significant than her up-to-date clothes. Despite her new position as First Lady of a new nation, the pretty ex-empress remains an anachronism in this world of today. With her quick wit and sense of humor, she could adjust herself rapidly to modern conditions, probably, if given half a chance, but this 26-year-old daughter of the Manchus has been a prisoner all her life.

THE ex-empress does not pretend to comprehend international politics, which have driven her from her palace in the golden-tiled Forbidden City of Peking to this little railway junction in the heart of the Manchurian prairies, and it was not long before she was discussing a matter closer to her understanding: clothes and jewels and fashions.

She explained that when it was decided that the new state of Manchukuo should be a republic instead of a monarchy, she put aside her Manchu court gowns and, since Manchukuo is too young to have its own traditional costumes, she adopted the prevailing Chinese styles.

"SO they told us we could stay three hours longer. In the confusion, I left all my jewelry in the palace and I have never seen any of it since."

But the little ex-empress does not seem to mind the loss of her jade and pearls nearly so much as the loss of her ceremonial costume. She went on to tell more about this regal costume, the significance of every inch of which had been taught to her since childhood.

As a Manchu princess of the blood, she knew the import of all of these sacred symbols and appreciated the sacrifice which was committed when it fell into the hands of common soldiers.

But the First Lady of Manchukuo is interested today in her new style dresses, too. She obligingly went to her wardrobe and selected a dozen of her new frocks to exhibit, all cut in the latest style, and all very pretty.

While she was in her boudoir instructing two men servants which gowns to bring out, I had an opportunity to examine her sitting room, a large parlor awkwardly furnished with many plush-covered chairs. The only conspicuous ornament in the room was a large boat made of gold and silver wires, a gift to Mrs. Pu Yi from the Japanese Ladies' Society of Hsinking on the occasion of the inauguration of her husband as chief executive of Manchukuo, on March 9, 1932.

Her Excellency did not attend the inauguration ceremonies herself, nor does she appear at any other state function in the new capital. Once in a rare while she walks in Hsinking's only public park, but most of the time she stays inside the compound which has been set aside as her residence.

HERE she reads, plays tennis, plays billiards, and enjoys the company of her little white dog. Unlike many Chinese women, she does not care particularly for birds or gold fish or flowers.

Her friends in Hsinking today are restricted to a small group of Manchu women, the wives of noblemen who make up Pu Yi's retinue. Except for me, she had not even seen a foreigner for many months, although she is interested in meeting strangers and enjoys contact with the outside world.

The personal name of the ex-empress is Kuo Shia-si, but many years ago, when her husband adopted the name of Henry, she elected to be known as Elizabeth.

Empress Elizabeth has one more thorn in her crown, her own unsatisfactory relations with her imperial husband. They have no children and, from the Chinese point of view, it is only proper that Pu Yi should have concubines to provide him with heirs.

His first concubine, Shu Fei, has not only failed to give Pu Yi an heir, but last year she sued him for divorce.

The case caused a scandal in high Manchu circles, where one faction supported Shu Fei while the more conservative families declared her action against the Son of Heaven was sacrilegious. The suit finally was settled by a court decree granting Shu Fei $13,000.

FIRST LIQUOR LICENSE PLEA IN S. A. IN 33 YEARS FILED

For the first time in 33 years, this city council has received an application for a liquor license. It came last night, when L. J. Detrixhe, manager of the Green Cat cafe, filed application for a license to sell and serve light wines and beer at his place of business, "if the Volstead act is repealed or modified."

"I just wanted to be on the ground floor, in case beer came back," Detrixhe explained.

The application was referred to Police Commissioner E. G. Warner, who told newspapermen he would have a report to make on it at the next meeting of the council.

Ed Vegely, city clerk, declared that Detrixhe's application was the first of its kind that had been made in Santa Ana since 1899. In 1901, he declared, local option made the city of Santa Ana dry and so naturally there were none after that time.

WOMAN WINS PAN HELLENIC CLUB OF COUNTY IN MEET

ANAHEIM, Nov. 22.—In addition to the delightful programs that include a bridge party at each of the monthly meetings of the Northern Orange County Pan Hellenic association Mrs. E. E. Smith prominent club woman, spoke at the meeting held last night at the home of Mrs. Donald Cruickshank on Golden avenue, Fullerton.

Giving a resume of her trip to Russia this past summer Mrs. Smith dwelt chiefly on the human-interest side of her trip. She explained many conceptions that are in the minds of Americans in regard to the working of the five year plan due to the propaganda fed them through books, magazines and newspapers. Mrs. Faye Kern Schulz, president, presided and introduced the speakers.

Assisting Mrs. Cruickshank as hostess were Miss Mildred Lee, Miss Lillian Rivers and Mrs. Dona Williams.

At the conclusion of the bridge contest prizes were awarded to Miss Margaret Wentz of Anaheim first, Miss Carolyn Gibson of Anaheim second, and Mrs. Core Mae Waters of Fullerton, third.

Present from Anaheim were the Misses Dorothy Yungbluth, Florence Backs, Jessie Johnston, Helen Grafton, Marion Utter, Kathryn Adams, Margaret Wentz and Carolyn Gibson.

joined F. D.'s rebellion and sought the gubernatorial nomination.

"I am a candidate," said Hennessy, "at the request of men whose position in New York State politics has never been in doubt."

Said Roosevelt:

"Signalize inauguration of direct primaries by smashing the clique of 'contract statesmen' that controls Tammany."

Gathering the remnants of the Empire State Democracy about them, Roosevelt and Hennessy went to work with the avowed purpose of harassing or beating Murphy.

Roosevelt had been urged to run for governor, himself; but the situation seemed to call for Hennessy in that fight and F. D. in the senatorship battle. It made little difference, after all. The point was to give expression to anti-Murphy sentiment.

Among the features of the action will be the crash of a burning airplane upon the field during the battle. This will be accomplished through use of a model ship guided by cables. Additional shipments of explosives have arrived and actual placing of mines and eruptions on the field will start tomorrow.

Boss Murphy.
"Never mind," said F. D. "We've paved the way."

Friends urged Roosevelt to run in the election as an independent. But he declined.

"I believe," he said, "that primary candidates should abide by the results of the primary."

Thoroughly satisfied, he returned to Washington. War had broken out in Europe; the entire world was threatened. He was needed at his post.

The New York Times sent a editorial tribute ringing after him.

"He is a regular, blown-in-the-bottle, antiseptic, non-corroding, self-cooking, dyed-in-the-wool Democrat."

In one of the thousand small high-ceilinged, box-like office rooms lost in the huge State War and Navy building at Washington, D. C., a tall, athletic young man with nose-glasses sits at a desk piled with official-looking papers. The desk is neatly arranged despite the numerous documents, forms, reports. On the high walls are various maps of ocean routes, European countries, red-lined charts of railroad facilities. A commission from President Wilson, framed, breaks the monotony of the maps. On the mantelpiece is a bust of John Paul Jones.

The young man, minus coat and with shirt sleeves rolled up to the elbows, has a quick, efficient way of flipping the pages as he works. Officials pop into the office, ask brief questions, receive terse answers, and pop out again. There is an active quality about him as he jumps from his chair to reach the cigarettes in his coat to reach the cigarettes in his coat.

Franklin D. Roosevelt was 31 years of age, then.

The Assistant Secretary of the Navy had been one of the first appointees selected by President Woodrow Wilson. The appointment was expedited by the desire of Assistant Secretary Beaman Winthrop of New York (appointed at the beginning of the Taft administration) that his resignation be accepted with the least possible delay.

Roosevelt was undoubtedly chosen because Wilson liked his political tactics and was aware of his peculiar qualifications for the Navy post. But there was another persistent story incident to the appointment. It was based upon the fact that the Democrats had been out of power a long, long time . . . sixteen years. A cabinet had to be formed and the party's material was unusually limited. Josephine Daniels, elevated from editorship of the News and Observer in Raleigh, N. C., to secretaryship of the navy, was brought into the picture.

They were arraigned before Deputy U. S. Commissioner Milburn Harvey and bail of $2500 each was demanded which they did not make. Their hearings were set for tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock.

Vernon Fee and Joseph B. Trammell, Santa Ana men, who also were arrested in the recent "clean-up" have pleaded guilty and been fined and the only case now open on the books is that of John Sandow, of 262 West Washington avenue, who is expected to appear on November 25 to answer to a charge of sale.

DELAY DECISION ON PICKING 'ARMY'

With plans completed for preparing the Santa Ana Municipal Bowl for presentation of the battle spectacle, "A Night in the Aragonne," sponsored by the Drum Corps of the Santa Ana Legion post No. 331 and National Guard companies in Orange county, an unusual situation has developed, according to Director Roland Williams.

It seems that the units of the National Guard participating in the battles to be presented Friday and Saturday nights, have reversed usual form and want to represent the "enemy" rather than the victorious "Allies." It seems that the guardsmen want to occupy the "enemy" trenches and pill boxes.

Commander Kellogg of the Legion Corps and one of the leaders of World war veterans who will participate in the sham battles has indicated a willingness to grant the wish of the guardsmen and has assured them "we older fellows will see that they get some real good experience—just in case."

Definite decision on assignments is postponed until a check is made with Anaheim and Orange guard units tonight.

Among the features of the action will be the crash of a burning airplane upon the field during the battle. This will be accomplished through use of a model ship guided by cables. Additional shipments of explosives have arrived and actual placing of mines and eruptions on the field will start tomorrow.

They did it. But when the three weeks' campaign was over, the Assistant Secretary of the Navy found himself defeated two to one. He had polled 68,879 votes to 133,815 for Gerard. Hennessy was beaten. But 68,879 votes represented a sizeable challenge to the new government.

BUSINESS ATTRACTS BUSINESS

New enterprises are opening up in Santa Ana. These are coming here because after test and trial and examination, the directing heads of these institutions believe that Santa Ana is a city of possibilities, and of certain future.

Santa Ana is one of the outstanding food trading centers of the country, for its size. More food advertising finds its way onto the pages of The Register, and goes out into the homes of Orange county, than in any other city of its size in the United States. In fact, there are only five papers that exceed the amount of food advertising which the Santa Ana Register carries, regardless of the size of the newspapers or of the cities which they represent.

Santa Ana is not only the county seat city, but it is the largest city of the county, and with the magnificent net-work of roads, ramifying out into the county in every direction, for practical purposes, it makes possible that values coming from a larger trading population accrue to every home in Orange county.

The larger the volume of merchandise which any institution handles, the less need there is for profit upon any particular article. The profits are made up in the volume of trade, and not big profits upon the few things. This helps the customer, it adds to the volume, which in turn adds to the ability of the tradesman to reduce costs per unit. With the constantly increasing traders, property values and all business interests increase. And so it is beneficial from every point of view.

Business is looking better in Santa Ana and in Orange county. We have gone through, with other sections of the country, a hard grind. It has not been as hard here as in many other places. It looks as though we had certainly passed the lowest point, and were climbing the hill on the other side.

CREDIT PRESIDENT HOOVER WITH THIS

President Hoover has never been popular with the navy, and the report has gone about that when his defeat was assured, there was general rejoicing among the big navy men. It may be recalled that the head of the Navy League accused the President of gross ignorance of conditions, and the needs of the Navy. A commission appointed by the President at that time exonerated him of the charge, and condemned the man who made it. We believed at the time that it was foolish for the President to recognize it at all, but the incident illustrated what the feeling toward the President was.

The record of President Hoover in the matter of international relations and armaments was a most commendable one. Had his record on domestic problems been as appealing to the masses of the people, it is quite likely that the results of the election might have been different. Yet this record on armaments and foreign affairs was never stressed during the campaign, either by the President or his associates on the stump. Why? We can only hope that Mr. Roosevelt's foreign policy and his attitude on disarmament questions may follow the lines laid down by President Hoover. Had the President been given a free hand in foreign affairs, the problems might have been nearer solution than they are today.

There has been too much jingoism among Senators and Congressmen on matters of foreign policy. It is cropping out again now that the debt question has come to the front once more. Every student of international affairs knows that the debts can never be collected, that a default by the larger European nations would have serious effects upon our trade, and that so long as the solution is delayed, the present uncertainty in Europe will continue.

COMMUNISM AND FASCISM SIDE BY SIDE

The eyes of the world pretty much are on Germany today, to see whether or no Hitler will be Germany's chancellor. It seems that he can take this position, subject to certain conditions that have been laid down by President Von Hindenburg, which conditions Hitler declares no statesman would consider, as it would make independent action impossible.

One of the conditions was that there must be no tampering with the Reichswehr, the government emergency decrees, and the Federal commissionership of Prussia, the foreign policies, nor the article of the Constitution which provides the government with drastic powers in case of emergencies.

We rather predict that through some sort of compromise Hitler will become Germany's chancellor within the next few days. We believe this will be done because the business and financial interests of Germany would rather turn to Hitlerism, which is practically Fascism, than to have the Communists increase in power. While the Nazis have suffered losses in election, the gains have been made by the extremists.

Dicatorship certainly appears to be in the offing, and as between the dictatorship of the proletariat, such as is in Russia, and the dictatorship of capitalism, such as is in Italy, Germany will prefer the latter, and Hitler is their hope. It would be interesting, in the years to come, to watch the two experiments in the economic and industrial program of the two nations, Russia and Germany. There are two laboratories side by side, each would be working out great sociological experiments. The rest of us could well afford to watch and wait, providing our local conditions would permit us.

ALL EARS AT KEYHOLE OF CONFERENCE ROOM

The people of the United States would like to listen in to the interview today between President Hoover and President-elect Roosevelt. Their conversation might throw some light, for the rest of us, upon this vexing debt question.

It certainly would be profitable to all of us to listen to the discussion between these two leaders, one of whom has had the responsibility upon him, in relation to this question, for the past four years, and the other one, about to assume the responsibility to stagger along for the next four years.

We listened to the speeches of each of them, as they were appealing to the electorate for support, but those speeches were written out in a calculating manner to avoid that which would repel, and to use that which would win.

Now as they are faced with the hard facts of what must be done for our country's and the world's needs, and democracy could really profit from such elucidation, we will be left possibly to our imagination, and to what may be given out by each as the result of the conference. For if the conditions are followed out which Mr. Roosevelt laid down, and the conversation should be personal and informal, even the newspapermen may be barred.

HOOVER SHOWS FAITH IN BUSINESS

The story comes out of Washington that President Hoover has told friends he is going to take a holiday of from six months to a year, and then he is going to enter business.

This really should be an encouragement to business people generally, in regard to the business conditions in the country. It indicates that the President believes most sincerely that business is getting better, and this is not political "hooey." And he believes that he can make profit out of it.

We would declare this to be an encouraging sign. If he believed conditions were the other way, he would be quite determined to stay out of business. According to his friends, this period of six months or a year will be greatly shortened, as Mr. Hoover has never learned the joy of loafing.

The Future of the Future

The Christian Science Monitor

One of the interesting things about the future is its location. Perhaps we should be somewhat at sea regarding it if the campaign orators had been less emphatic in placing it. But they have so searchingly "looked forward into the future" that we have come to the conclusion, somewhat hesitatingly, perhaps, that the future actually lies ahead of us.

This being the case, something ought to be done to enable stump-speech makers and others to vary their "forward look" into the future. Nobody, apparently, ever has thought of taking a glance backward into the future. That has seemed absurd.

Neither has anybody urged a squint forward into the past. This has seemed equally ridiculous. Even attempts to take sidelong looks into the future have not met with any great measure of success. By whichever way one has sought to approach the future he invariably has found it lying ahead.

When, therefore, one hears the orators speak of "looking forward into the future," he wonders if the speakers are anticipating a change in its position; if they, perhaps, are contemplating surreptitiously sneaking up to the front and edifying their listeners with the results of an occasional backward glance into future prospects. In that case, the phrase, "looking forward into the future," may not be as tautological as it sounds; merely looking into the future—in the future—will have to be qualified if the "looker" is to know in what direction to gaze. Forward, backward and sideways glances into the future each will have its separate meaning.

In the meanwhile, other speakers will doubtless continue to "advance forward" toward their several goals, "linked together" by a single unit of purpose, which will enable them to "ascend up" to heights where they may "still continue" to "advance forward" to the "good benefits" which they hope to reap.

Not in the Babbitt Manner

New York Times

Robert S. Brookings was not the typical American business man. At any rate, he was not the stylized American business man of the Babbitt tradition. His career in many ways contradicts the established notions—notions sometimes justified, sometimes a mere legend. For instance, he did not find it hard to retire from business, as too many successful Americans do, but gave up money-making in his early forties.

To be sure, the fortune which he had accumulated by that time was very handsome. It was big enough to endow, on a scale truly Medicean, the various research schools at Washington that later merged into the Brookings Institution. In return Mr. Brookings had the satisfaction of knowing that the scholars whom he so generously patronized have made a contribution of high value to our economic and social problems under the leadership of Harold G. Munton.

Of Mr. Brookings himself one wonders why some contemporary novelist has failed to seize upon him and so make a brave departure from the wooden and wearisome Babbitt legend? What a delight it would be, and at the same time what a contribution to truth, to know that an American business man might be a rich and savory personality, a man of learning and imagination, of wit and mirth, with a touch of eccentricity allied to genius which the European writers will not deny to their business men heroes, even when they are most severe with them. Our own novelists have rarely been able to get away from the stuffed-shirt business men of Zenith.

Typhoons and Stoicism

San Francisco Chronicle

Perhaps a reason for the stoicism which is so marked in the Japanese character can be found in the typhoons and earthquakes which so frequently devastate their country. There are visitations they can neither foresee nor guard against. Nothing short of abandoning the country, can be done about them. Earthquakes may strike at any moment, typhoons at any moment in their season.

It is remarkable then that the Japanese have developed so prominently a capacity for enduring the worst, shrugging their shoulders and going on without exteriorities. Japan is a country made to order for fatalism. What is preordained will happen and nothing man can do will alter the course of events. Only the all-knowing gods, who worked it all out in advance, can even know anything about it.
